

WGGC 2026 – PASS 2 Player Season Reviews

Below are five bullet-point summaries for every player, explaining how their season unfolded under the Best 7 of 10 format. Each set of bullets is written to be distinct.

1. Ian Hammond (Position 1)

- Finished the season ranked 1 with a Best-7 total of 250.4 Stableford points.
- Played 9 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they produced dependable returns in most appearances.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they had a limited number of peak scoring days.
- Ultimately, the format rewarded their season-long approach, putting them firmly in the division mix.

2. Rob Ward (Position 2)

- Finished the season ranked 2 with a Best-7 total of 242.7 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they produced dependable returns in most appearances.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they lacked the very highest scoring peaks compared to rivals.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 format worked strongly in their favour, ending the campaign on a competitive note.

3. Andy Whittaker (Position 3)

- Finished the season ranked 3 with a Best-7 total of 242.1 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they showed solid week-to-week consistency.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they had a limited number of peak scoring days.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 cut-off limited upward movement, overall delivering a positive season outcome.

4. Antony Wale (Position 4)

- Finished the season ranked 4 with a Best-7 total of 241.8 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they had a steady scoring profile across the season.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they produced timely big rounds when needed.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 rule filtered out weaker rounds effectively, overall delivering a positive season outcome.

5. Martin Fooks (Position 5)

- Finished the season ranked 5 with a Best-7 total of 239.5 Stableford points.
- Played 9 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they avoided extreme highs and lows.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they lacked the very highest scoring peaks compared to rivals.
- Ultimately, the format rewarded their season-long approach, resulting in a respectable final position.

6. Stuart Andrews (Position 6)

- Finished the season ranked 6 with a Best-7 total of 239.5 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they maintained a reliable scoring baseline.

- In terms of scoring ceiling, they produced timely big rounds when needed.
- Ultimately, the format rewarded their season-long approach, leaving room for improvement next season.

7. Peter Weston (Position 7)

- Finished the season ranked 7 with a Best-7 total of 234.3 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they produced dependable returns in most appearances.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they relied more on consistency than explosive scores.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 cut-off limited upward movement, putting them firmly in the division mix.

8. Steve Price (Position 8)

- Finished the season ranked 8 with a Best-7 total of 229.3 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they produced dependable returns in most appearances.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they lacked the very highest scoring peaks compared to rivals.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 format worked strongly in their favour, ending the campaign on a competitive note.

9. James Little (Position 9)

- Finished the season ranked 9 with a Best-7 total of 228.0 Stableford points.
- Played 7 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they had a steady scoring profile across the season.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they lacked the very highest scoring peaks compared to rivals.
- Ultimately, the format rewarded their season-long approach, overall delivering a positive season outcome.

10. Jeff Winters (Position 10)

- Finished the season ranked 10 with a Best-7 total of 226.4 Stableford points.
- Played 7 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they had a steady scoring profile across the season.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they produced timely big rounds when needed.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 rule filtered out weaker rounds effectively, leaving room for improvement next season.

11. John Howard (Position 11)

- Finished the season ranked 11 with a Best-7 total of 218.4 Stableford points.
- Played 10 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they maintained a reliable scoring baseline.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they relied more on consistency than explosive scores.
- Ultimately, the format rewarded their season-long approach, resulting in a respectable final position.

12. Jason Carroll (Position 12)

- Finished the season ranked 12 with a Best-7 total of 180.8 Stableford points.
- Played 5 events, shaping how much flexibility they had under the Best-7 rule.
- Throughout the year, they had a steady scoring profile across the season.
- In terms of scoring ceiling, they posted several standout high Stableford rounds.
- Ultimately, the Best-7 format worked strongly in their favour, overall delivering a positive season outcome.